An Extract of a private Letter from the HAGUE, dated September 11.

"WE grow more and more impatient, as the time seems to draw nearer, to see the French evacuate our fortresses. It looks as if they would not very soon have an opportunity of coming by them at so cheap a rate; a resolution being taken to keep the troops of the republic always compleat, and to use our utmost endeavour to draw the most experienced officers from all parts into her service. We are very solicitous to know in what manner our barrier is to be settled, which is a point of the highest consequence to the state. In all probability it will be to the full as strong, tho' not so extensive as before, and that care will be taken to secure such a district to each fortress, as that the revenue arising from it may defray the charge of the garrison; at all events, we shall not charge ourselves as before, with the joint jurisdiction over, or defence of places.

The commissioners in Friesland find themselves a good deal embarrassed, the populace being extremely irritated against their superiors. Some of their deputies appearing before the commissioners, and being check'd for proceeding in so rough a manner with their governors; one of them made answer, My Lords, granting it to be as you say, (tho' upon examination you will find it to be otherwise) we have only exacted these few weeks as they have treated us for many years, both without justice, humanity, or humanity. The middle sort of people however are more tractable; and provided they are not reduced again under the dominion of their former lords, they seem ready enough to submit to whatever can be reasonably imposed upon them; so that we hope all disputes there will be very quickly composed.

It is beyond a doubt, that after the peace is made, and all things settled here, a calm and impartial enquiry will be made into the management of civil and military affairs, for several years last past, in order to discover how the republic came to be loaded with such immense debts, while our fortresses were suffered to run to ruin, our troops were incomplete, and our naval power dwindled quite away; and all this at a time when the private subjects of the republic were excessively rich, and more especially those who were concern'd in the great farms, or had the direction in any shape of the finances. Some say that his serene highness, as prince Stadtholder, will soon after his return from Amsterdam make a tour to Leuwarden; so that his journey to Breda seems to be laid aside."

Vienna, September 1. Her Imperial majesty has ratified the sentence pronounced against baron Trenck, by which he is condemn'd to pay 1,000 florins to the inhabitants of the duchy of Silesia, and all the costs of this tedious and expensive suit, which some say will amount to 200,000 florins, besides which he is to forfeit all his honours, and be imprison'd for life, with an allowance of only a ducat per day. The short history of this extraordinary person, who has made so much noise in the world, is this. He is a native of Schwabia, and descended from a noble family, to which he has done no great honour. At the age of fifteen he was obliged to leave his country for murder, and some other little crimes of that sort, upon which he went first into the Polish, and then into the Russian service, where, by his intrepid courage, he raised himself to the rank of a major, which however did not hinder count Lowenthal from calling him to an account for some cruelties he had committed, and for which he was sentenced to be shot'd, and that too without favour; for if justice had then taken place, he must have lost his life. Upon his return into Hungary, he had the misfortune to be tried for a small booty, and degraded as a gentleman, and with these did a great deal of mischief. Upon the breaking out of the war he obtained a pardon, and entered into her Imperial majesty's service, in which, to do him justice, he behaved with much bravery; but after pillaging without mercy in Silesia, Moravia, Bohemia, and Bavaria, he thought himself at liberty to treat the subjects of his sovereign as he treated her enemies, and committed such a variety of violences as brought complaints from all quarters; so that nothing but her majesty's clemency could have entitled him to so mild a sentence as that which he has received. He is said to have amassed, by these means, a fortune of better than two millions.

Hanover, Sept. 6. The chevalier Offorio, minister from the king of Sardinia, has just received an express from his court, with orders to set out forthwith for Aix la Chapelle, and assist at the pacific conferences, in quality of his first plenipotentiary. It is thought his excellency will set out next week, and we hope no far her delays will be thrown in the way, upon pretence of waiting for instructions.

Brussels, Sept. 8. The government has received orders from court to reform the new battalions raised last year, which have not served this campaign; but no term is fixed in the ordinance published for this reform.

Ostend, Sept. 8. The vessels that were built last year at Rupelmond, have been sold to a Dutch merchant for 100,000 livres, together with a great quantity of timber, and other materials for ship building.

Paris, Sept. 6. They have made out at the war-office a list of the regiments that are to be disbanded, pursuant to the convention of the 2d of August, within a month after we shall have received the news of the Russian troops being marched back to their own country. Hitherto the court has not received any positive advices of their returning homes; nor have the powers, with whom that convention was concluded, notified in form the return of those troops.

The plan of the definitive treaty, as drawn up at Aix la Chapelle, by our minister and those of the Maritime powers, has been communicated to the duke de Huescar, the Spanish ambassador, who has sent it by an express to Madrid, and we are in great hopes that it will meet with his most Catholic majesty's approbation.

We are assured that the king will visit the frontiers of his dominions next spring; which we are not backward to believe, because if the war continues, he will make the campaign in person; and if a peace be concluded, 'tis probable he will divert himself during the fine season.

Paris, Sept. 11. An ordinance of the king has been published concerning the militia; and as his majesty is resolved to send them back immediately into their respective provinces, and is desirous that this corps, which has render'd him important services, as well in the field, as in garrison, should be kept up: This ordinance contains the several regulations, which are to be observed for that purpose, in regard to the manner of their return, the advantages they are to receive in their respective professions, and several rights and privileges, which his majesty has been pleased to grant them.

As the court has received the news of the entire evacuation of the duchies of Parma, Placentia, and Guastalla, and of the infant Don Philip's having left the army, in order to go and take possession of those dominions, the king has thought fit to name a part of the lords and ladies who are to go and receive the infanta upon our frontiers, and who are also to accompany that princess into her own dominions.

We are assured, that in consequence of this evacuation, the states have given orders for the restitution of the towns of Maestricht and Bergen op Zoom; and as the other restitutions will be quickly made, the necessary directions have been also given for evacuating the Austrian Low Countries. The conclusion and signing of the definitive treaty is look'd upon as a thing ultimately settled.

Letters from Provence, that the admiral duke de Bellisle will not leave that country, 'til towards the end of next month.

month, and that the army under his command will not separate, 'till the infant don Philip is quietly seated in his new territories.

Naples, Sept. 13. A few days since the king's gallies seiz'd on the coast of Sicily, a Barbary pyrate boat, which had greatly infested those coasts. Last week the squadron of Malteſe gallies anchor'd a second time at Gaeta, and two of them were dispatched to Baiæ, to take on board an hundred criminals, condemn'd to the galley for life, of whom the king has made a present to the grand master of Malta.

Hamburgh, August 31. There has been an edict published in Sweden, prohibiting afresh the use of either gold or silver in apparel; and enacting, that all Swedish subjects, tho' in foreign countries, be obliged to observe the same ordinance, both with regard to their own persons, and the liveries of their servants, &c.

Aix-la-Chapelle, Sept. 12. The ministers plenipotentiary continue to have private conferences; but it seems as if nothing definitive would be done 'till the return of the plenipotentiaries of the States General, and the arrival of the count d'Ossorio, the Sardinian plenipotentiary. Expresses are also still expected from Vienna and Madrid. As there are many points to settle, and the treaties of Westphalia, Breda, Nimeguen, Ryswick, Utrecht, and the quadruple alliance, must be consulted, so the basis of the new treaty, a great deal of time must be spent before all matters are adjusted.

Vienna, Sept. 4. Mr. Keith, whom his Britannic majesty has appointed to succeed sir Thomas Robinson, arrived here from Hanover the 1st instant. Two grand conferences have been held at court, wherein the plan of a new barrier for the republic of the United Provinces was deliberated upon. According to which, it will be formed of the town of Dendermonde, the citadel of Antwerp, of Mechlin, and of the territory which extends from that place along the Dyle, the Leck, and the Old Demer, as far as Maestricht, terminating at the Maese. In this case, Archot, Sichem, and Diest, will be forfeited.

Amsterdam, Sept. 4. When the deputies of the merchants had the honour of an audience of the prince stadtholder, the chief of the deputation made a very fine speech, testifying their zeal and affection for his person, and for his royal consort, and all his illustrious family; and recommending to his care and attention the interest of their colonies, the protection of their navigation, and the encouragement of their manufactures, &c. His serene highness answer'd them with that natural affability and eloquence which charm every body.

After having thanked the merchants for the honour they did him (expressing himself in that gracious manner) he assured them of his inclination and continual attention towards every thing that might tend to advance commerce, which he looked upon as the life and soul of the prosperity of their city, &c. The many important affairs which had required the presence of the stadtholder in this city having been happily determined, his serene highness set out this day for the Hague, attended with the acclamations and benedictions of the inhabitants, who are exchiming with expressions of sincere acknowlegments. The streets through which his serene highness passed were lined with a double row of burghers under arms, having their captains and other officers at their head; and the prince's coach was preceded by two deputies of each of the sixty companies of burghers, who marched four and four abreast.

Warsaw, Sept. 7. Advices from Lithuania import, that six miles from the city of Wilna, there have appeared several large swarms of locusts, which have devoured every thing that they found in the fields; and that so large a quantity of them passed over the town of Minski, that during five days together, they appeared like a thick cloud over that city; and it is added, that they have eaten up all the corn and grass as far as Mohilow, and the Dnieper, so that the inhabitants are reduced to great want.

Milan, Sept. 9. There is a talk here of an exchange being made between the empress queen, and the king of Sardinia, whereby the city of Pavia, and it's territory, will be yielded to that prince for the northern part of the Novarese, and that piece of land which extends along the left side of the Lac Majeur, and the Tesin. The notion of this exchange is confirmed by the great quantity of ammunition and military implements which have lately been transported from Pavia to the castle of Main.

Paris, Sept. 16. They write from Madrid, that the king has settled a plan for the reform of his troops, but it will not be put in execution 'till the peace is signed; and that the forces which are in Italy will soon return into the kingdom of Spain; they are supposed to be at present in motion, and are to return from Italy by the way of Languedoc and Roussillon, and from thence into Catalonia.

Petersburg, Sept. 5. It is said the duke de Byron, late duke of Courland, and his lady will be set at liberty, and reinstated in his former dutchy. Our men of war that were in the Baltic are ordered to be laid up at Cronstadt.

Genoa, Sept. 16. We have been advised from Corsica, that the person called Matra, head of the rebels, having failed in his enterprize against the tower of Paladella, had been abandoned by the greatest part of his people, and was retired into the Pieve of Valerie, without any appearance of rallying his party; so that it was hoped that the rebellion in Corsica, every day losing strength, would soon be entirely suppressed.

Vienna, Sept. 14. The establishment of the new barrier of the United Provinces, seems to be one of the principal subjects of the deliberations of this court. The question is not only what cities and places shall form this barrier, but the extent of the districts which shall depend on them, the revenue arising from which is to be appropriated towards the maintaining of the garrisons of those places.

LONDON.

Sept. 25. The great hopes of setting at liberty the Dutch prisoners of war in France, is said to be entirely adjusted, and that they have received notice to hold themselves in readiness to march at a day's warning. The Abbe de la Ville will return to the Hague, in order to resume the functions of his ministry, about the beginning of October; when it is said that a new Dutch ambassador is expected at Paris.

There is certain advice from Santa Cruz, that the plague in the empire of Barbary, hath for some time raged to such a violent degree, that thousands have died thereof.

Sept. 17. The Genoese have sent a minister to the court of Turin, in order to recover the favour and friendship of his sardinian majesty: and 'tis believed they will send a person of great distinction to the court of Vienna, in quality of ambassador extraordinary to her imperial majesty, for the like purpose, as soon as the peace shall be concluded.

Sept. 22. Letters from the Low Countries take notice, that the generals of the Allies and the French have entered into concert with each other, upon exterminating several bands of thieves and vagabonds, deserters from both armies, which infest the interjacent countries.

They write from Vienna, that on the 8th instant, N. S. in the evening, her Imperial majesty was delivered of a princess, which died soon after it was baptised.

The master of a Swedish ship arrived at Leghorn from Algiers, reports, that four Portuguese ships, laden with sugar, &c. were carried into that place by their corsairs, and that the crews consisted of 180 men.

Yesterday the board of ordnance order'd 14 new pieces of cannon to be sent to Languard fort, near Harwich, which has been repaired for that purpose.

They write from the Hague, that it is hoped the new powers granted to the stadtholder, for changing the magistrates in the several towns of the provinces of Holland, will have all the good effects which were hoped for from them; and that the public tranquility being once restored, proper measures will be taken to remove any errors that may have crept into the government, and redressing any grievances that may have happened in it's administration.

We hear that the right honourable the earl of Holderness will go ambassador to the States General.

A new man of war of 60 guns, is to be launched this day at Deptford, and is ordered to be immediately rigged, victualled, and manned, for his service.

Sept. 26. Yesterday at noon a waggon, very heavily laden with chests and barrels of money, came to the Bank from Deal, guarded by a company of grenadiers, for the use of the merchants of this city. The money came in the Sheerness man of war from Lisbon.

The Merlin sloop of war is order'd to be fitted out, and dispatched with all speed to the governor of Cape Breton.

We are assured that an express arrived last Tuesday, with the copy of a plan for a general pacification (as was inserted in some of the news papers) but that there was no account come to a foreign minister, that last Thursday was the day appointed for the signing the treaty of peace.

They write from Berlin, that orders have been received there, for furnishing hay for the forces of the empress during the winter season; that corps de garde is gone to Altenstein, and that the residence of the monarch is preparing for him at Potsdam.

They write from Bruxelles, that letters from different parts of the empire continue to affirm, that the subjects of the emperor's journey into Bohemia is the execution of an arrangement by which the dignity of king will be established to his Imperial majesty during life, without the least prejudice to the disposition established by the Pragmatic sanction.

Letters from Palermo mention a frightful sea monster, which had been discovered floating near the coast, so large that six oxen pair of oxen had been employed to draw it upon land.
